Association for Psychological Science: 34th Annual Meeting

Chicago, IL | May 26, 2022 – May 29, 2022

In May 2022, I presented my poster titled Examining loneliness as a moderator of the relation between perceived stress and anhedonia at the 34th Annual Meeting of the Association for Psychological Science. Presenting my research at a national conference was an incredible opportunity. I was able to gain experience presenting my own research and answering questions from researchers from all over the United States. This is essential practice for my Senior Honors Thesis and my future career in Psychology. Furthermore, I was able to attend numerous symposiums and research presentations throughout the conference. I thoroughly enjoyed learning about many different psychological research projects being conducted across the United States. I am extremely grateful for the Shackouls Honors College supporting my research and making this trip possible.
